NASAP adoptables

Sheena

This pretty little puppy is only about three months old. Sheena is a shepherd-cross, likely with some husky in her. So although she's not very big now, she will probably grow into a large dog.

Sheena came into foster care with her sister, Misha. Sheena is not only the smaller sister, she's also more shy than Misha.

Morris

Evergoing Morris is a mottled male tabby who's been declawed.

Tall, handsome Morris is a slender cat.

The former stray is very affectionate.

If you think Sheena or Morris could fit into your household, please call the Northern Alberta Society for Animal Protection at 922-0250 or check its Web site at www.nasap.ca. NASAP, based in Edmonton, is a no-kill animal shelter which finds foster homes for pets until they are adopted.

You! Be The Judge... You're Rich Until You Leave Me!

Surie sipped her martini at the restaurant bar. "Can't wait to meet the new boss. Christina says he's cute, loving and best of all...loaded!"

Marilyn frowned. "She doesn't need a man to take care of her?"

"Well, I wouldn't refuse a convertible... and a shopping trip to Paris," Surie gushed.

A man approached the table. "You must be Christina's friend."

Surie burst out, "Christina didn't mention that her dad was coming?"

The elderly man hesitated. "Actually, I'm Alexander, Christina's boyfriend."

"Silence."

"He...see if she's at the door..." Alexander walked off. Marilyn glared at Surie. "I can't believe you said that? Surie shrugged. "Well considering how old he is, I'd say it was a pretty forward mistake."

The dinner went well despite the embarrassing beginning. Alexander was a charming host. The champagne flowed.

"They, do you have a brother?" Surie couldn't resist asking.

Late that evening, Alexander sent the butler away and offered Christina a sherry in his study mansion.

"I love you, Christina."

Christina hesitated. "I love you, too."

"I have something for you..."

He handed her some legal papers.

Christina frowned. "Not exactly what I was expecting..."

"...and I want you to get independent legal advice."

The next day, Christina showed her friends the papers.

"A cohabitation agreement?" Surie exclaimed.

Christina explained. "It means that I can enjoy my standard of living while we live together... but not after."

"It's lovely..." Marilyn gushed.

"Who can blame him?" Christina rationalized. "He's worth millions. Anyway, I'm no fortune hunter..."

The relationship flourished. Christina continued work as an office manager but enjoyed the trappings of wealth: luxurious homes, trips, diamonds.

Eight years later, the relationship soured.

Alan ran to her friends. "He's so cold. Maybe he found a younger woman?"

"I say dump jumps," said Surie. "And sue him for support."

"But I signed the agreement."

"Are you ready to go back to the lifestyle of an office manager?"

"Let's go to court," Christina decided.

IN THE COURTROOM

Alexander adjusted his silk tie. "The signed agreement is clear. I support her in luxury while we live together but in the event of separation, Christina has no claim against my property. She can't claim against my car's come crying now."

Christina was sitting. "I signed that agreement..."

"Because I loved Alan and he said I'd have to move out otherwise. But after 7 years together, I shouldn't have to go from a wealthy lifestyle back to barely making ends meet."

Does Alexander ever support YOU? Be The Judge! Then look below for the decision.

DECISION: "Pay Christina a million dollars," decided the Judge. "The agreement is clearly unfair. It doesn't protect Christina, the more financially vulnerable party. She deserves help with the difficult transition at the end of the relationship, considering the dramatic change in lifestyle."
